

Ads of the Week: 6 Campaigns That Caught Our Eye, From Walmart to Xbox

The holiday ads keep coming. This week's standouts ranged from Walton Goggins embodying the Grinch for Walmart to a Dunkin' Munchkin on a quest for holiday belonging.

Uber Eats also kept its running joke about football's food conspiracy alive with Bradley Cooper and NFL quarterbacks, and Yahoo poked fun at loud office typers with a playful "keyboard oil" collab. Meanwhile, Amazon Leo introduced its satellite network through a global countdown, and Xbox pushed to close the gender gap in soccer coaching with an in-game challenge that leads to real-world training.
