

Apple TV is getting MLS games at no extra cost

Starting with the 2026 Major League Soccer (MLS) season, “all MLS matches” will be available to Apple TV subscribers “at no additional cost,” Apple and the MLS announced today.

Since the 2023 MLS season, streaming MLS games has required an MLS Season Pass subscription, which was available on its own or for a discount for Apple TV subscribers. But next year, like with Apple’s upcoming F1 streaming for Apple TV subscribers, MLS games will be bundled right into Apple TV.

“Starting next season, fans can watch every regular-season match, the annual Leagues Cup tournament, the MLS All-Star Game, the Campeones Cup, the Audi MLS Cup Playoffs, and more – all included with an Apple TV subscription,” according to Apple’s press release. “The standalone MLS Season Pass subscription on the Apple TV app will conclude at the end of the 2025 season.”

The official announcement of the change followed reports from earlier on Thursday that it was in the works.

<https://www.theverge.com/news/820595/apple-tv-mls-games-bundle-no-extra-cost-subscription-season-pass>