Aura’s Aspen impressive digital frame is the most affordable it’s been

Returning to work or school from summer vacation is never easy, but the Aura Aspen could help you hold onto your favorite memories by putting them front and center. And right now, you can pick up the digital photo frame for around $199 ($30 off) from Amazon, Best Buy, and Aura, which is a new low price.

For a digital photo frame, the slim, 12-inch Aura Aspen looks remarkably traditional. My colleague Jennifer Pattison Tuohy found its paper-textured, anti-glare matte display and 1600 x 1200 resolution makes pictures appear sharp and lifelike, while the 4:3 aspect ratio means most smartphone shots should fit perfectly. It even comes with its own adjustable metal stand that looks like one you’d find on a regular photo frame.

But unlike a normal photo frame, this one could be a gift that lets you keep on giving. Like other Aura digital photo frames, you can update it anytime with new photos, whether you're sending pics of the grandkids to mom's frame or beaming a college student the latest pictures of the family pet. Just upload pictures via the companion app available on iOS and Android, sync them automatically via iCloud Photos or Google Photos, or email them and they'll appear. What's more, you can also add text captions, display Live Photos from your iPhone, and even showcase 30-second videos that play sound.

Three more deals to kick off your weekend

https://www.theverge.com/tech/756979/aura-aspen-digital-photo-frame-garmin-inreach-mini-2-deal-sale