Equity & Justice Poster Design During COVID

5 August 2020
New York

The Poster House in New York is hosting an online event with Isometric Studio, a Brooklyn-based design studio led by queer people of color. They will be discussing the transformative role of posters in promoting inclusion, equity and justice.

The program will begin with a presentation on the history of Public Service Announcement posters, including initiatives to address the pandemic. Afterward, Isometric partners Andy

Chen and Waqas Jawaid will present case studies of how tech, educational and cultural institutions are using poster and spatial design to address the experiences of people of color. In the end, there will be a Q&A. All attendees are welcome to share their own posters in response to the program during or after the event on social media.
