There is no doubt about it: the way we work has changed considerably, especially due to the current health crisis, and the speed of these changes will only continue to increase in the future.

As the need for flexibility in the post-COVID workplace continues to rise, organizations will need to build agile teams that help to prepare and respond to change quickly. A fractional talent model that includes both full-time and flexible staff can help executives build scalable teams that can help organizations become change-ready.

In this live webinar, Danny Beckett Jr., Founder & CEO of Assemble Technologies and Advisor at Entrepreneur NEXT will detail how Fractional Talent can help organizations adapt to a rapidly evolving landscape while minimizing the risks normally associated with hiring new talent. Attendees will learn:

- How to find, vet, and hire the right fractional talent for their organization
- Tips for building successful agile teams that are more efficient and affordable

- What to takes to retain fractional talent within agile teams, and build a positive culture in a varied workforce
