Google Will Lower Some Payment Fees for App Developers

Google announced it will collect only 15% on payments made to developers through its app marketplace, the Google Play Store, for the first $1 million in annual sales. After that point, the tech company will begin charging its regular 30% fee, a move that mainly benefits smaller mobile app developers. The new policy kicks in on July 1.

Recommended articles
https://www.adweek.com/media/google-will-lower-some-payment-fees-for-app-developers/