

Google's Nest Wifi Pro has returned to its best price yet

When you're in the middle of a task, there's nothing more frustrating than suddenly losing your internet connection – take it from somebody who lost their Wi-Fi signal while writing this very sentence. Thankfully, Google's Nest Wifi Pro is currently on sale in select colors at Amazon and Best Buy, where a single unit is going for an all-time low of $139.99 ($60 off). Other shades are on sale for $20 more, or you can pick up a set of two or three for around $239.99 ($60 off) and $319.99 ($80 off), respectively.

With its resemblance to a Nest Audio speaker, Google's mesh router is an attractive gadget that'll blend in with the rest of your home. At the same time, it's highly capable, with support for Wi-Fi 6E as well as Thread and Matter. One unit covers up to 2,200 square feet, which is enough for a small apartment – and you can always buy another if you need more coverage. It also offers consistent speeds, even if it doesn't quite live up to Google's claimed support for maximum speeds of 2400Mbps on 5GHz and 6GHz. Plus, it helps that it doesn't come with any subscription fees.

If you're in the market for a new tablet, right now you can get the 10th-gen iPad with 64GB of storage for $349 ($100 off) or 256GB for $499 in select colors (also $100 off) at Amazon, Best Buy, and Target. That matches its Black Friday all-time low.

At this price, we think the latest iPad is a much more worthwhile purchase. Unlike its predecessor, it offers a large, 10.9-inch screen similar to the iPad Air's while offering USB-C connectivity. Equipped with the A14 Bionic chip, it's faster than the Air as well and supports gesture-based controls. It's a shame it doesn't support the second-gen Apple Pencil like the iPad Air, but hey – I guess you can't get everything in life, right?