Iniu’s tiny 10,000mAh power bank is almost half off right now

Small power banks are a dime a dozen, but Iniu’s P55-E2 portable charger stands out for its combination of size and capacity. We saw the this model drop in price during Amazon’s recent October Prime Day sale, but a fresh discount has now made the power bank cheaper than ever. Right now, you can pick it up at Amazon in black for just $13.74 after applying the automatic 45 percent off coupon at checkout.

While it’s not quite as compact or light as the Verge-favorite Iniu Pocket Rocket P50 power bank, the P55-E2 features an ultra-slim design and a large 10,000mAh battery. It supports charging speeds of up to 45W via one of its USB-C ports, allowing you to quickly charge your smartphone, tablet, or gaming handheld, including the Nintendo Switch 2. There are three USB ports in total (two USB-C and a USB-A), making it possible to charge three devices simultaneously.

Beyond its size and capacity, the P55-E2 offers a few features that make it an even better value. For instance, it has a display that shows the remaining charge of the power bank in real time, and it supports pass-through charging, so you can charge both the power bank and a connected device at the same time. Its detachable lanyard also doubles as a USB-C cable, giving you everything you need to start charging out of the box.

Update, October 20th, 2:50PM ET: Adjusted the post to clarify that this discount is on the Iniu P55-E2, not the smaller P50 (which is referred to by Iniu as the “Pocket Rocket”). While both chargers have 10,000mAh capacity and 45W top charging speed, the P55 is a little bigger and heavier than the P50. Still, it’s pretty small!

https://www.theverge.com/tech/799260/iniu-45w-usbc-power-bank-deal-sale