Interactive VR Experience for LCD Soundsystem’s “tonite”

LCD Soundsystem teamed up with Google’s Data Arts Team to create a virtual dance party set to the band’s latest track “tonite.” Directed by artists Jonathan Puckey and Moniker, the interactive project involves a series of rooms filled with abstract dancers moving to performances created entirely by fans. In addition to the desktop version (which lets you click on a person’s “head” to see from their POV!), VR headsets can also be used to contribute your own choreography to the party. Click here to check it out. More images and behind-the-scenes video below!

[embedded content]

Dance Tonight Website

Via It’s Nice That