

Jeremy Jenkins Leaves Indianapolis Station WISH After Two Years

Jeremy Jenkins has said goodbye to WISH in Indianapolis after two years,

“This role was the chance of a lifetime my first full-time weekday morning anchor job and it made my lifelong dream come true. For that, I’ll always be grateful,” he wrote on social media. “After a decade of chasing opportunities and climbing in my broadcasting career, it’s time for a little breather. Time to rest, catch up with family and friends, and let God lead me to the perfect next step when the time is right.”

Before joining the station in 2023 as a morning anchor, he worked at WGAL in Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

He didn’t say where he’s heading next, but closed his social post by saying, “Here’s to the memories, the growth, and whatever comes next.”
