It's difficult to qualify exactly what makes a great mobile app. The best apps, truthfully, don't make you think about how good or bad they are at all. They just work. When mobile apps work seamlessly, it's a sign of excellent design. As apps continue to grow and virtually every company seeks to build their own app, competent mobile designers are in huge demand. If you've ever wanted to build an app or you're thinking about changing things up in your career, check out The Complete Guide to Designing a Mobile App.

Led by the web's top-rated instructor Rob Percival, this 7-hour course takes you from the absolute basics through to more advanced topics. You'll start with a primer on design principles to get in the right headspace before diving into the technical how-to. Through exercises and challenges, Percival will help you develop and verify your skills. By course's end, you'll have built three complete projects using Sketch and learned how to plan, sketch, wireframe, and design apps from concept to completion.

The app design industry is worth billions. If you want a slice, enroll in The Complete Guide to Designing a Mobile App today. Right now, you can sign up for $14.99, 92 percent off of $200.
