

Nearly 80,000 Anker speakers recalled due to fire hazard

The affected models – A3102016, A3302011 and A3302031 – were sold exclusively on Amazon in 2023 and cost between $28 and $130, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC). Approximately 69,000 speakers were sold in the US, and an additional 9,764 were sold in Canada.

Anker and Amazon have contacted all known purchasers, according to the CPSC. The affected speakers can be identified by an SN code that is printed on the underside of the speakers. To check whether your devices were affected, type the SN code on Anker's website. Anker said it will offer free replacement speakers to those affected.

Consumers who own the recalled speakers are advised to stop using them immediately, power them off, and disconnect them from chargers or other external power sources.

<https://www.theverge.com/2024/12/5/24314217/anker-bluetooth-speaker-recall-fire-hazard-amazon>