

New York City Opens a City-Funded AR/VR Lab In Brooklyn's Navy Yard

New York City wants to make an old naval yard in Brooklyn a hotbed for virtual reality and augmented reality. City officials, professors and entrepreneurs on Thursday gathered in Brooklyn's Navy Yard for the opening of RLab, a 16,000-square-foot center that will house AR and VR startups while also providing research, education and training for...

<https://www.adweek.com/digital/new-york-city-opens-a-city-funded-ar-vr-lab-in-brooklyns-navy-yard/>