

Nintendo omits original Donkey Kong Country Returns team from the remaster's credits

Donkey Kong Country Returns HD, the just-launched port of the 2010 Wii game, doesn't include individual members of the original Retro Studios development team in the credits, as reported by GameSpot. Since the discovery, however, Nintendo has commented on the omission, giving a statement to Eurogamer.

"We believe in giving proper credit for anyone involved in making or contributing to a game's creation, and value the contributions that all staff make during the development process," the statement reads, which is sourced only to Nintendo and not to a specific individual. The game's credits reveal that the port was done by Forever Entertainment.

<https://www.theverge.com/2025/1/17/24346145/nintendo-donkey-kong-country-returns-hd-team-credits>