Pixar’s Elemental will hit Disney Plus streaming on September 13th

Disney has announced that Disney Plus subscribers will be able to stream Elemental, its parable about interracial relationships, beginning September 13th. The company is also releasing a making-of documentary for the film, called Good Chemistry: The Story of Elemental, and an Up-related short called Carl’s Date for its streaming service.

Elemental, which had a $200 million budget, managed to pull in $480 million on its box office run, according to Disney, despite a mediocre June opening that initially seemed to spell doom for the movie. It’s directed by Peter Sohn, and its screenplay was written by Kat Likkel, John Hoberg, and Brenda Hsueh. Elemental stars Leah Lewis, Mamoudou Athie, Ronnie del Carmen, and Shila Ommi and features performances by Catherine O’Hara, Mason Wertheimer, and Joe Pera.

Disney also announced that Disney Plus (with ads) will be $1.99, instead of $7.99, per month for three months if you subscribe before September 20th. Pixar’s next movie, Elio, is due in theaters on March 1st, 2024 and will tell the tale of a kid who is abducted by aliens and then pretends to be the leader of Earth.

https://www.theverge.com/2023/9/6/23861205/elemental-pixar-disney-plus-release-september-13-streaming