

Print Club London presents Choose Love

Don't miss Print Club London's return to Somerset House with its second Choose Love exhibition—in support of the charity Help Refugees.

London's acclaimed screen-printing studio Print Club London has been working with a selection of its favourite artists to produce a collection of works to be exhibited at Somerset House. The exclusive limited edition screen prints and original hand finished artworks will be sold throughout the event, with all profits directly supporting the work of Help Refugees.

Help Refugees is a group of everyday people, taking joint action to improve the lives of refugees. In less than two years, it's become the biggest facilitator of grassroots aid on the continent, with more than 80 projects across Europe and the Middle East. Print Club London is working alongside them, raising funds for those who need help and assisting them in their mission.

Now in its second year, the collaboration has seen artists make their mark on the iconic 'CHOOSE LOVE' slogan originally created by Katharine Hamnett in the 1980s. From print making, to collage and photography, each artwork is a one-off and unique in its design.

The Choose Love exhibition at Somerset House marks the second year of this project curated by Print Club London. It has so far raised over £50,000 for the charity and seen artists such as Sir Anish Kapoor, Alexa Coe, Stanley Donwood, Mustafa Halusi and Noel Fielding contributing artworks to the project.

Each piece is available to buy throughout the exhibition, and then later via Print Club London's online gallery.

26 July-31 August 2019. Somerset House, Strand, London WC2R 1LA.
