Search Engine Land Awards deadlines extended until July 2020

To all of our readers, we hope you and your colleagues are well and safe in these challenging times.

In an email we sent out back on March 18, we announced that – in an attempt to take at least one thing off applicant's plates – the Search Engine Land Awards' Early Bird deadline would be pushed to April 17. That deadline has once again been extended to Friday, July 24 at 11:59 p.m. PST. To review the updated application and fee schedule, please click here.

We're all adjusting to the reality of operating during a global pandemic, and we hope this newly-extended deadline will help give your team ample time and resources needed to complete your application.

Now, more than ever, agencies and marketing teams across the world are looking for a competitive edge to win much sought-after business. The acclaim and recognition earned by winning a Search Engine Land Award is a meaningful way to help achieve this crucial goal.

When you're ready, we invite you to create your account and explore the application process. If you have questions, please reach out to us at awards@searchengineland.com.

We wish the best to you, your team and your families. Stay safe, stay healthy, good luck with your submission and our team looks forward to reviewing your work!
