

Ted Lasso gets a cute claymation holiday short

Season 2 of Ted Lasso ended on something of a dark note, but everything is all nice and friendly again in a new holiday short. It's called "The Missing Christmas Mustache," and, like many classic holiday specials, it's rendered in cute and charming claymation.

It features voices of the main cast – including Jason Sudeikis, Hannah Waddingham, and definitely-not-CGI Brett Goldstein – as they search for a missing mustache. It's only four minutes long, so I won't spoil too much, only to say you should at least watch to learn a little more about Roy Kent's eyebrows.

If nothing else, it makes up for the poorly-timed Christmas episode of Ted Lasso that aired in August – and threw my sense of time and date even further out of whack. And it's a nice little taste of the show's wholesomeness while we all wait for season 3 to come to Apple TV Plus.

<https://www.theverge.com/2021/12/15/22838509/ted-lasso-claymation-holiday-short-apple-tv>