

Woot is offering over 20 percent off Switch 2 controllers and games today

Woot is running a day-long sale coinciding with the start of Amazon's Big Spring Sale. Many products across multiple tech categories are discounted, including dozens of video games and accessories. What's more, you can get an extra 20 percent off through 12:59AM ET on March 26th when you use code SAVETWENTY. Also, if you're a Prime member who links their Amazon account, you'll get free shipping.

Of the grab bag of products, the Nintendo Switch 2-related discounts stood out the most. For instance, you can get the physical version of Mario Kart World at Woot for $52 ($28 off). If your Switch 2 didn't already include a digital copy of the exclusive, World is a must-have racing title that's fun to play alone or with others (my colleague Andrew Webster called it "the perfect launch game" in his review). It includes an open world chock-full of challenges – a series first – or you can race through different course-filled cups, just like in the old days.

Additionally, 8BitDo's fantastic Ultimate 2 and Pro 3 controllers – both compatible with the Switch 2 and other platforms – currently cost $36 and $37.60, respectively. Considering that both gamepads typically cost over $50 each, the savings are steep enough to consider getting more than one gamepad. The Ultimate 2 and Pro 3 have a similar set of features – rumble, motion controls, TMR joysticks, customizable back paddles, an extra shoulder button, and adjustable triggers – but their button and stick layouts cater to different gamers.

While the Ultimate 2 is arranged like a Switch 2 Pro (which itself is an Xbox-style layout), the Pro 3 is more akin to a PlayStation controller, with sticks close together in the middle. One neat feature of the Pro 3 not found in the Ultimate 2 is the ability to pull off its magnetic buttons and swap their positions, which is handy if you're switching platforms. Both models also feature a 90-day Woot warranty. Read our Pro 3 review.

If you already own Mario Kart World – or don't own a Nintendo Switch or Switch 2 – there are also plenty of other great deals to choose from, including titles for both the PlayStation 5 and Xbox Series X / S.
